More particularly, the present invention relates to a pharmaceutical formulation and compositions, kits, and methods for the treatment of allergic and autoimmune diseases, such as chronic inflammatory diseases, using the pharmaceutical formulations. 2. Description of the Related Art Synthetic derivatives of corticosteroids are widely used to treat a variety of inflammatory diseases, including chronic inflammatory diseases. Examples of synthetic corticosteroids include prednisone and methylprednisolone. While corticosteroids are the primary current treatment for chronic inflammatory diseases, the side effects associated with corticosteroids have limited their use. These include nausea, mental status changes, fluid retention, and hypertension. A recent advance in the art is the development of novel synthetic glucocorticoids, such as QL-X-81-01. Under normal conditions, the quantity of anti-inflammatory corticosteroid circulating in the blood is low in order to minimize side effects, such as water-electrolyte imbalance and glucocorticoid-induced osteoporosis. When a patient is faced with a non-infectious, potentially debilitating illness or with an infection in an immunosuppressed host, a drastic increase in the quantity of circulating corticosteroid is required. Unfortunately, the normal side effects of corticosteroids still apply to these patients. For example, patients with acute or chronic allograft rejection have been treated with corticosteroids to reduce signs and symptoms of the rejection. While corticosteroids have a beneficial effect in this setting, the corticosteroids have potential adverse effects including corticosteroid-induced gastritis, dysphagia, gastrointestinal bleeding, hypertension, hyperglycemia, hyperlipidemia, osteoporosis, changes in plasma electrolyte levels, and increased susceptibility to infection. 1915), is the child's suit not barred by the mother's fraudulent concealment from her child of the injuries that caused the child's death? Would it not be as repugnant to the asserted rights of the child to prohibit his right to sue his mother in an action brought by him to recover for his injuries as it would be to the asserted rights of the mother to prevent him from prosecuting such a suit? In the instant suit the child, Elizabeth, is the plaintiff, and the suit is founded on an alleged contract made by her mother, Emma, with the defendant, Ella. The suit is predicated, not on the mother's fraud, but upon the alleged contract between the mother and the defendant, Ella, made for the child's benefit. There is no fraud on the part of the mother alleged, and no averment to the contrary. It is not averred that she fraudulently concealed from the child the injury she received from her son, Benjamin. The fact that the injury is said to have resulted from the negligence of her son cannot make the mother and son joint tortfeasors. No such relationship could exist between them where, as in the case at bar, the tortious act of the defendant is not alleged to have been done for the benefit or in the interest of the child. *523 The suit of the infant Elizabeth against the defendant is predicated on an agreement between the mother and the defendant, Ella, made for the child's benefit. The child makes no claim against the defendant that the contract was entered into without her mother's consent. The sole claim is that the contract was entered into without the knowledge of the child. The facts involved in this claim are the same as in the defense of the mother. The court was not warranted, therefore, in disallowing the defense. The next question involves the construction of section 224 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides: "An infant is a person under a disability until he arrives at the age of eighteen years." The Code provides that the age of majority is twenty-one years. (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 339.) The language of this section of the Code is definite and certain, and the defendant, Ella, had a right to rely upon the statute and proceed under it and insist that Elizabeth was not entitled to have her cause of action allowed against her, because she was an infant under disability. This affirmative defense was bad, and the court should have sustained the defendant's motion to

World's greatest economy? Maybe not. By Eric Toussaint and Randall Palmer Updated 2:31 PM PDT, Thursday, October 31, 2019 Hide Transcript WEBVTT
THE U.S. ECONOMY. HOW HISTORY WILL VIEW THE UNITED STATES ECONOMY?SCHOOLS BEING CLOSED FOR DAY.MANY WERE IN FEAR. THERE WAS SO MANY -- PLANS FOR KIDS TO STAY IN.BUT HERE ARE 10 THINGS THE WORLDWIDE ECONOMY WILL REMEMBER THE UNITED STATES ECONOMY, THE LAST 12 MONTHS.ALREADY OVER. The world's largest economy is, in fact, getting smaller. By one measure, the U.S. economy shrank in the first quarter of this year, shrinking for the first time in four years. But these numbers are misleading, say economists and economists' at the Bank for International Settlements. For example, they calculate the second quarter actually grew in the third quarter (as opposed to shrinking), the economy grew in both quarters of 2017 and 2018. The total was 7% in the second quarter of this year. There's a long way to go in this recovery. So experts are keeping their eyes on four key measures: Labor force participation is holding steady at about 63%. Employment growth for the last seven years has slowed to 2.8% per year. These numbers come from a government report, but not including overtime, which could add 1%. There are still three weeks left in the year. In February, according to a BIS survey, we are expected to have added 200,000 jobs in the first three months of 2019. Before that, the BIS pointed to a possible recession by 2020 if employment growth slows. The U.S. economy appears healthy, but it's different than it was a year ago. "It is growth, but not what we think about as steady growth," says Michael Gapen, chief U.S. economist at Barclays. "We're getting positive growth, but not as much of it as we need to have to have a complete recovery." "The U.S. economy is weakening and appears to be at risk of entering a recession," write the BIS. They expect the slowing to begin in the second half of the year. Economists agree. "This is about
